The answer and cross bill of the Memphis City Railway Company to the injunction recently sued out by the Citizen Street Railway Company, was filed in chancery yesterday.

Respondent denies that it made the selection of the streets it would occurry Soon after the graniting of its charter, but any experiments of the streets it would occurry Soon after the graniting of its charter, but any experiments of the streets it would occurry Soon after the graniting of its charter, but any experiments of the streets it would occur with the selection of the streets it would occur yet on the Louisville and Nashville depet south to Calboun street; thence, in the year following, to the Mississippi and Tenonessee depot, extending it in 1875 to Alabama street, and in 1885 to Jacksoit street, rivending the same line north in 1872. The Polysia street line was brief from Main to Mannessas in 1886, extended to Dunlay. The Reale street line, running on Lauderdia to Mississippi avenue in 1882. Its Hernando street in was changed from Hernando to Louderdiale to Mississippi avenue in 1882. The Vance street line was extended in 1874 from St. Agnees the Main, and afterward east beyond the Charleston road to Humboldt Park.

Respondent denies that the location of its lines extended on Lauderdiale to Mississippi avenue in 1882. The Vance street in the was extended on Lauderdiale to Mississippi avenue in 1882. The Vance street in the suburbs were unsupplied with street Main, and afterward east beyond the Charleston road to Humboldt Park.

Respondent denies that the location of its lines extended on Lauderdiale to Mississippi avenue in 1882. The Vance street in the suburbs were unsupplied with street the public service demanded, and was in the act of extending its system on Mailen, and afterward east beyond the Charleston road to Humboldt Park.

Respondent denies that the location of its lines exchanged from Humboldt Park.

Respondent denies that the location of its lines exchanged from Humboldt Park.

Respondent denies that th

he act of extending its system on Madison, second, Union and Polk streets when omplainant wrongfully arrested the work of construction. Respondent is now actively at work laying a track on Jefferson treet. Respondent denies that any of its racks are public nuisances, and disputes the questions of its rights in reference to he Taxing District, which the bill of the INSANE ASYLUM.

the Taxing District, which the bill of the Citizens' railway alleges.

Respondent denies that its capital stock is grossly inadequate for the purpose of supplying street railways. Respondent denies that all of complainant's stock has been subscribed by solvent persons, who are willing and able to pay the amount of their subscription. It is admitted that George Gillham made application to the Taxing District, but does not know if he is Ponder Over.

George Gillham made application to the Taxing District, but does not know if he is acting for the Citizens' Railway Company.

Respondent denies that it ever applied to the Taxing District authorities for permission to lay down its tracks upon the streets of Memphis, but simply asked for the grades. The appropriation by the Taxing District of its streets to the Citizens' Railroad Company has no legal or hinding ailroad Company has no legal or binding fect, and denies that said company signised any intention to accept any benefit under said pretended grant, until respond-ent had commenced the construction of its road upon Second, Madison, Polk and Union Streets to construct street railways, are not already occupied by respondent.

Respondent denies that it has no use Respondent asks that the Citizens' Street Railway Company be restrained from fur-ther operations upon the following lines:

1. Commencing at the intersection of Second and Kerr streets, south to Beale.

2. Commencing at the intersection of Washington street and Polk and Bull Run streets, northwest on Polk street to Alexstreets, northwest on Polk street to Ala-bama, east on Alabama to Winchester avenue, then northwest on Winchester ave nue to Johnson avenue. 3. Commencing at the intersection of Main and Madison streets, east on Madison to Old Madison street, then east to the Memphis and Charleston depot.

4. Commencing at the intersection of Union and Second streets, east on Union treet to Union avenue, along said avenue to Middle street, thence south on Middle street to Vance.

5. Commencing at the intersection of Main and Jefferson streets, east of Jefferson street to the Memphis and Charleston epot.
All of aforesaid lines are to be double tracks and to be constructed in the most approved manner.

The cross bill was gotten out and the injunction granted by Judge J. T. Flippin at Covington, Tenn, September 14, 1885. The bill goes on to recite the same objection to the charter of the Citizens' Railway included in a former bill, and avers that by an old injunction the Taxing Distanced from interfering or interdoing well. way included in a former hill, and avers that by an old injunction the Taxing District is restrained from interfering or intermeddling or delaying respondent in the construction of its lines on Second and Madison streets and others already named, and the contract of the Taxing District with the Citizens' Street Railroad was a violation of the injunction. Therefore respondent prays that the Citizens' Railroad be enjoined from the further proseroad be enjoined from the further proce

NO SMALL CONSIDERATION, as it is too often the case that property which appeared to be valuable enough when purchased by the State, decreases in value immediately afterward. There is yet another consideration which cannot be overlooked. The report of Dr. Colen-der, superintendent of the Insane Asylum at Nashville, to the General Assembly in 1885, shows that $6676 86 worth of field, garden and orchard products were sold from the associate grounds in the Nash ille markets, so that

MEMPHIS WILL PURNISH in equal or better market for all produc an equal of better market to rail products raised, thus enabling the asylum to become, in a measure, self-supporting.

A SPECIAL telegram in another column announces the marriage last night, at Covington, Ky., of Mr. E. Whitmore, of the Memphis Evening Ledger, to Miss Cora Perry, a young lady who made many friends in Memphis during a brief sojourn in the city. She is a lady of scholarly attainments, big heart and warm sympathies, and will be a valuable accession to Memphis society, and it is predicted by her friends that her charming traits of character will secure for her a greeting so cordial that the love of new friends will greatly subdue her attachment for those she has left behind. This elegant lady will brighten the household she enters—prove a fitting helpmeet to her husband. The bride and groom left Covington this morning for a tour North and West, and Mr. Whitmore's Memphis friends join in wishing him happiness and in expressing the hope that he may bring safely home his treasure. A large circle of friends here will open to receive him and his wife at their coming, and if hearty and real friendship could be set to music, there would be melody for them through all their lives.
